MAC offers unique guidance for Mission Viejo

With a population of more than 40,000, Mission Viejo qualifies as one of Orange County's larger municipalities, but it is unique in that it has no mayor or city council, nor the stiff taxes that often accompany city government. Mission Viejo is guided by a Municipal Advisory Council (MAC), a group of five publicly elected officials who perform advisory and quasi-administrative duties without being paid. Although the council does not promulgate laws nor levy taxes, it makes recommendations on issues of local concern to the Orange County Board of Supervisors which does have those powers.

As a totally planned community, Mission Viejo has been spared big city problems, but from time to time, issues arise which require the ombudsman type of the MAC, whether they be taxes or traffic, parks or signal lights.

Under those circumstances the residents of Mission Viejo take their concerns to the MAC which, like an old-fashioned town council, hears their case and then makes appropriate recommendations to the Orange County Board of Supervisors. The Municipal Advisory Council presently is the only MAC operating in Orange County and, over its four-year history, has demonstrated its effectiveness by having a near perfect record in having its recommendations adopted by the Board of Supervisors.

"I'd estimate that we're probably batting about 80 to 90 percent," MAC chairman John Noble said.

This system of local participatory government has been successful in helping county supervisors to better understand the desires of the communities they govern, while at the same time providing a forum for citizen participation on local issues.

To assist with the council's deliberation on local matters, six standing committees have been appointed to review local concerns and to make prudent recommendations to the council, taking into account the needs of the community as a whole.

To launch its unique form of government, Mission Viejo took advantage of a California state law that allows the formation of municipal advisory councils and the enjoyment of their advantages without the high costs associated with cityhood.

Other unincorporated areas in California are beginning to follow Mission Viejo's lead. However, according to Noble, Mission Viejo's is the only MAC that is non-funded (council members volunteer their services), with the exception of operating costs, which are borne by local residents through property taxes levied through County Service Area 9.

Committee recommendations that will fulfill the desires of the largest possible segment of the community.

"We are at more of a grass roots level in trying to get feedback and information (from the community) which we in turn express to the Board of Supervisors," Noble explained.

Noble is urging residents in this planned community to continue to take an active interest in MAC activities. Public meetings are held the second Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the MAC office located in Miners Village, 27021 La Paz Road, Suite 2K. Local newspapers publish agendas for these meetings and all residents are encouraged to attend.

Broadway players joined approximately 40 student, staff and community thespians last month to inaugurate Saddleback College's brand spanking new theatre for the performing arts. The troupe, under the direction of H. Hyun Pearce, is finishing a remarkable run of the classic musical version of Cervantes' Don Quixote saga, "Man of La Mancha."" The play comes to a close with a midnight matinee Sunday, Feb. 5 at 5.

The 400-seat theatre is part of Saddleback's new $3.2 million fine arts complex, a 64,000-square-foot facility which accommodates a complete educational program for the arts: theatre, art, music and speech.

Community response to the college's offering of subscriptions to its first season of special events at the theatre was overwhelmingly enthusiastic.

"Season tickets sold out within one week after subscriptions were made available, and there are more than 1,000 people on the waiting list for our first season," said Bill Schreiber, college spokesman.

Programs on tap for the college's inaugural season in addition to "Man of La Mancha" include the Romanos classical guitar quartet, the Hartford Ballet, the foghorn enthusiasts Wagner Chorale, the Williams College Madrigal Singers, the one-man portrayal of James Thurber and a star-studded production of "Look Homeward, Angel."

The opening production features the talents of Broadway performers in the lead roles: David Holliday as Don Quixote, Teri Ralston as Aldonza and Rudy Troiano as Sancho Panza.

On Broadway, Holliday has played the lead role in "Man of La Mancha," opposite Katherine Hepburn in "Coco" and in the production "Music." Teri Ralston, whose roots in acting are sound right here in south Orange County, has appeared in the Broadway productions of "A Little Night Music," "Baker's Wife," and others.

Saddleback's Sancho Panza, has also played that role on Broadway, where he also had roles in "Smile, Smile, Smile," "Your Own Thing," "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," and "Irma La Douce."

Local thespians receive honors for 1977 talents

Several Saddleback Valley Community Theatre thespians won critical acclaim from Daily Pilot drama critic Tom Titus in his 1977 year-end review of Orange County theatre groups.

The local troupe had one production listed in the top ten and received five acting awards out of a total of twenty presented.

“We’re justly proud of these awards and feel the community will enjoy sharing them with us,” said Ben Julis, theatre spokesman.

“An Inspector Calls,” directed by Jean Hyde, was the production selected as one of the year’s best, and for his portrayal of the title role, Michael Bielec was named best actor of the year. Joan Sidel was runner-up for best supporting actress for her performance in the same production.

In his review of the play, Titus described it as “a tight, compelling production a cut or two above the normal British whodunit.”

The other two productions cited were “Light Up the Sky,” with honorable mentions awarded to actresses Jane Nigh Davidson and Joanne Applegett. Joe Condi received honorable mention for his performance in “Don’t Drink the Water.”

Not resting on their laurels, the group is now in rehearsal for the Orange County premier of classic American playwright George Kelly’s last play, “The Fatal Weakness,” to be directed by Julis.

The production opens March 3 at the Mission Viejo High School Little Theatre. Leading roles are being essayed by two acting honorees, 1976’s Jean Hyde and 1977’s Joan Sidel.

Ticket information is available by calling 586-8342.

Residents sworn in

Two Mission Viejo residents who were elected last November to the Moulton Niguel Water District Board of Directors were sworn into office Dec. 1.

Dwight A. Williamson and Richard S. Fiore will serve four-year and two-year terms on the board, respectively.

Williamson is retired after 37 years with Ball Metal Decorating and Service Company; Fiore is a partner in the law firm Smallwood and Fiore.

MV named winner of top award in floral extravaganza

The question buzzing all over Mission Viejo is “How will we ever top this year’s Rose Parade float?”

“Naturally, we’re hopeful that we’ll be able to receive one of the major awards next year, too,” commented Art Cook, Mission Viejo Activities Committee (MVAC) chairman, in reply to the query. His voice still reflected the elation of the moment he learned Mission Viejo had produced a winner.

The euphoria of winning the Saddleback Valley Community Theatre group for the most beautiful non-commercial entry in the 1978 Tournament of Roses Parade still hovers over the community; and residents who played a part in the actual construction and decoration of Mission Viejo’s float, “Day of the Fiesta,” are savoring memories of a job executed to perfection.

Those people — local high school students and members of the MVAC (sponsors of the project) and their families — labored day and night for a week before the event, meticulously keeping their float in floral regalia — efforts which were such an important part in securing the judges’ accolades.

“It was fantastic!” exclaimed Dorothy Huber, MVAC member who helped flower the float. “I was really glad I got the chance to work on it, especially since it won the top award. And the kids (who flowered the float) attitudes were terrific! They really got a big kick out of it.”

Mrs. Huber attributed the success in part to the strict attention to detail required by the float supervisor.

“In some cases it took us about five hours to cover just three inches—everything had to be perfect. I thought that was a little much, but it was that meticulousness that counted.”

“The conception and execution was very thorough,” said MVAC member Dwight Williamson, reflecting on his experience. “The ability of the designers to visualize how the finished product would look and just what types of flowers should be used is the most fantastic thing.”

While the community of Mission Viejo backs in the pleasures of victory, float designers at Fiesta Floats, the firm contracted by the Activities Committee to build the community’s 1978 entry, have their thoughts focused on the future.

According to Cook, float designer Paul Rodriguez is already rapping the depths of his imagination for ideas which again will lead Mission Viejo to the winners’ circle.

Mission Viejo equestrian, 14, turns in ‘A-Plus’ performance

Fifteen-year-old equestrian Chrissi Gilleran competed last November in the Copper State Nationals in Tucson, Ariz., and by the time she was finished judges had rated her performance “A-Plus.”

The Mission Viejo resident chambered away from the show, with taking a total of 19 ribbons and 7 trophies, including the coveted Robert H. Kieckheffer Challenge Trophy for Champion Quarterhorse Performance.

Chrissi rode "Cimmaron George" (a quarterhorse she had leased for the month of November from her close friend Lisa Miller) in both English and Western classes during the competition.

"George is stocky enough to go Western, yet tall enough to go English," explained Chrissi.

Chrissi’s accolades testify to her equestrian abilities. Even in difficult situations, she never lost her cool, which she demonstrated during a Western riding class wherein the rider is required to open a gate while mounted and then maneuver around a series of barrels.

Cimmaron George balked twice before Chrissi was able to open the gate, and to make matters worse, the cinch on her saddle broke during her ride.

Chrissi, however, relying on her sense of balance, finished with an award-winning performance.

“I just had to thank my lucky stars,” said modestly, recalling the experience.

Lisa would have ridden Cimmaron George herself in the show, but she had broken her leg in late October, making it impossible to consider competing in the November event.

“Since I wasn’t riding, and the horse needed exercise, we decided to lease him out,” she said.

But despite her casted leg, Lisa went to Tucson with Chrissi and two of their friends, Andrea Beck and Ellen Roberts.

It was Lisa’s, Ellen’s and Andrea’s responsibility to make sure Cimarron George was impeccably groomed for competition.

“I worked really, really hard grooming, even though I was supposed to stay off my leg,” Lisa said. “...They (horses) have to look their best to show.”

Speculating on how her own performance would have been had she ridden, she continued, “I probably could have won everything too, just like Chrissi.”

Although she was disappointed about not being able to ride, Lisa had no hard feelings about the situation. "Chrissi's a really good friend of mine. We've known each other for about five years. I'm happy for her.”
