Everyone’s invited to the seventh annual Mission Viejo old-fashioned Fourth of July Picnic at Mission Viejo Golf Course, beginning at 1 p.m. The Bicentennial fireworks display starts at 8:30 p.m.
MV’s Diablos band marches through American history

Seventy-six trombones may be enough for a big parade, but it takes a lot more music to ring in America’s 200th birthday. That is why Mission Viejo High School sent 116 of its finest musicians, singers and drill team members to Boston, New York, Washington, D.C. and Philadelphia earlier this week to participate in one of the largest bands ever assembled in the United States, the 1,000-member Cavalcade of Bands.

The Southern California group, consisting of the 11 finest high school marching bands, will strike up rousing patriotic tunes in such historic places as Independence Hall, the Capitol, Pennsylvania Avenue, and Boston City Hall during their two-week Bicentennial tour.

WITH 116 MEMBERS, the Diablos represent the largest contingent of the Cavalcade which left June 22 and will return July 5 after participating in Washington D.C.’s official Bicentennial Parade.

They were joined by musicians from Orange Glen, Montebello, Buena Park, Christian, Temple City, Patrick Henry, San Bernardino and Mt. McGill high schools, as well as the Santa Ana Winds and the Riverside Entertainers.

Band director Terry Newman doesn’t have to worry about another performance this year, said Cook. “And for us here in Mission Viejo, it just comes naturally.”

DURING HIS RECENT visit to Mission Viejo, President Gerald R. Ford presented the honor and excitement of hosting a national anthem.

Thousands of spectators crowded onto the senior lawn at Mission Viejo High May 23 to greet the President of the United States Gerald R. Ford, who was in town to participate in the dedication of the community flag and to catch a glimpse of the President. During his remarks, the President complemented the high school marching band and drill team and applauded the exploits of the Nadadores swim team.

President Ford, escorted by Mrs. Edgren, then approached the flagpole to assist members of the Cultural and Heritage Committee raise the gold, brown and white standard carrying the historic Rancho Mission Viejo brand, the “Rafter M.” circled by the words Mission Viejo, California, 1866,” as the band played the national anthem.

Following the dedication and acceptance of a 126-year-old copy of the Massachusetts State Legislature “Rules of Order” from Richard Lowcock, MAC chairman, President Ford hailed Mission Viejo as an “exceptional community.”

As one of the new towns in the United States, Mission Viejo stands out because of your tremendous community being built entirely with private funds. I congratulate Phil (Reilly) and all of the others who have had a part in doing this, with the initiative of all of you in this tremendous location, this wonderful atmosphere.

During the ten years that you have grown I understand you have handled your programs with great money, and boy, you can be proud of that! What you have accomplished here is what I have been trying to do with the Federal government. You have been a lot more successful than I have.

The Chief of State complimented the Mission Viejo High School band, drill team, and Nadadores champions.

“What a great high school marching band, and the drill team is awfully good, too. Being a swimmer myself, I am impressed by the number of championship swimmers that Mission Viejo produces.”

As a moment of his visit to the community, President Ford presented an American flag that had flown over the White House to Keily Fox, Mission Viejo High School Associated Student Body president.

For the community of Mission Viejo, the honor and excitement of hosting a Presidential visit will long remain a treasured memory.

Mission Viejo Company awards scholarships to six area students

Mission Viejo Company awarded a total of $1,250 in scholarship money to five seniors graduating from high schools in the Saddleback and Capistrano Unified School Districts and a Saddleback Community College student, according to Art Cook, manager of community information programs for Mission Viejo Company.

The scholarships were awarded to students planning to “pursue their education in a field related to the land development or home building industry,” said Cook.

“In this regard, such fields of study appropriately related fields,” he added.

Two students were selected from Mission Viejo High School, Brian Smith and Thomas Kruse.

Saddleback College scholarship

According to Cook, the scholarship funds will help defray the costs of tuition, books, registration and lab fees. Mission Viejo Company is pleased to participate in the various school districts’ scholarship programs which recognize scholastic, educational, and vocational ambition,” commented Cook.

MV keeps its hometown warmth

What has made Mission Viejo one of the most popular areas in the country in which to live? The tree-lined curvilinear streets? The landscaped medians? Property appreciation? Recreation facilities?

No, said one long-time resident. Pretty streets and rec centers are nice accessories, but a community is judged by the enthusiasm of its residents.

MISSION VIEJO stands out because so many people have made individual contributions to the community: the woman who organized Mission Viejo Beautiful Committee to encourage attractive landscaping; the high school golf team that fought its way to a CIF championship; members of the hospital guild who sell Christmas cards for the benefit of the children's hospital; the subcontractor who takes pride in his work; the small merchants who have seen their businesses grow with the community; the swimmers who practice at 6:30 every morning.

The first Mission Viejo residents moved into the community ten years ago. Today, the population is nearing 35,000. Although the size of the community has changed, the atmosphere has not.

"We had a real pioneering spirit," said Wendy Edgren, a nine-year resident who is currently chairman of the Mission Viejo Municipal Advisory Council's Culture and Heritage Committee. "Back then, we didn't have any commercial development. We had to travel miles to get a loaf of bread or a dress," she said.

"Today, that's all changed, but there's still a need for the same pioneering spirit. We're a maturing community with a great need for individual contributions."

Mission Viejo remains a dynamic and worthwhile place to live because residents are willing to give of themselves. The conscious effort of every person—working together—sharing the load—is what makes Mission Viejo such a successful community.

Tran Minh Cong and his family were among 100 Vietnamese refugees to be sponsored by a local church whose members undertook the task of finding homes and jobs for the immigrants, or assuring their support until they had work.

Once again, Cong's knowledge of the English language served him well. "I needed a job, and wanted to help Vietnamese people here learn some English—these people needed to learn the language in order to communicate. So I organized a free English class at our church."

Later, Tran Minh Cong acquired a job teaching English as a Second Language (ESL) to Vietnamese students attending schools in the Saddleback Valley Unified School District. He circulates among 13 schools in the district, assisting his students with their studies, communication problems and overall adjustment to a new environment.

According to Cong, his job will last as long as the district has sufficient governmental funds to support the ESL program. "It's a whole new life for these Vietnamese students and their families, who gave up everything in their frantic scramble to escape life under Communism. Several of them fled their native land alone in search of American freedom and opportunity."

"These youngsters are happier with their new families," reports Cong. "But they are very homesick. One tells me sometimes he feels lonely and miserable, but otherwise he is happy with them."

If it weren't for the ESL program the Vietnamese children would be at a complete loss scholastically, according to Cong. "They had a very difficult time communicating at first; they could not understand the teachers' instructions, nor could they take notes in class. And often they isolated themselves because they were afraid to mix with other children, having such limited ability to communicate."

The casualness of teacher-student relationships in American schools has been another difficult adjustment for Vietnamese children, who are accustomed to much more formality and discipline in the classroom.

To them, the teacher represents truth and knowledge. They are taught to respect, obey and acknowledge their teachers, and they rarely volunteer to participate in classroom discussion; they wait to be asked. "However, there is very little trouble with the younger children, who adapt very easily to American customs and the language," says ESL instructor.

The GRADUATE of the University of Western Australia is studying computer programming at Orange Coast College "in order to acquire another skill."

Cong and his family enjoy the southern California lifestyle. They live all the conveniences we have here, says Cong. Housing is much more compact in Vietnam. Saigon, where I lived, is a very crowded city. There is no space for parks, as you have here, and land in the city is very expensive because of the dense population. Only the very affluent can afford to live in houses with yards.

"We find the homes here are very well-planned and comfortable." TRAN MINH CONG, his wife and two children are homesick for their native country. I could not return to Vietnam now. If I were to go back, they would 'chop my head off.' There is no point in returning now, with the current government circumstances, but I want to keep up the hope."

When asked how often he felt about his children adopting American customs he replied, "I would prefer that my children retain their own culture; not that I don't like the American culture, but we want to keep something of our own."

Mission Viejo Happenings:

In and around Mission Viejo

Fair notice

Mission Viejo resident, Carl Glassford (pictured below) will give instructive details on the art of pencil and color illustrating during a demonstration at the fine arts department of the Orange County Fair on July 17. The Orange County Fair, themed “Good Old Days—Our Orange County Heritage,” will run July 16-25 at the Orange County Fairgrounds in Costa Mesa.

Entertainment highlights include country-western singer Merle Haggard, appearing July 20 and 21 at 8 p.m.; Rare Earth, appearing July 18; and country-western singer Marty Robbins, July 22.

Exhibits in floriculture (rare plants and unusual flower arrangements), home living and design and a culinary arts show starring top chefs will be on view to the public.

Other exhibits include the California crafts exhibit featuring artisans demonstrating various crafts continuously; fine arts exhibit, highlighting three of the county's finest sculptors and daily demonstrations by artists; prize-winning photography displays; and an industrial arts exhibit.

The livestock judging and auction, open to youngsters belonging to 4-H and Future Farmers of America organizations, will round out the fair in traditional style.

Green gathering

It'll be a 50-states reunion as Mission Viejo residents gather once again to celebrate our nation's 200th birthday at the community's seventh annual 4th of July parade. Patriotic fun-seekers are invited to spread out their picnic feasts on the Mission Viejo golf course "back nine," on the north side of Oso Parkway, beginning at 1 p.m., to enjoy a relaxing day of traditional old fashioned family entertainment.

Entertainment and the 50-states program, which provides picnickers an opportunity to meet other people from their home states by registering at welcoming tables representing all states in the union, will commence at 3 p.m., according to a Mission Viejo Activities Committee spokesman.

Bill Baker, a Mission Viejo resident who calls himself the "Yankee Tunesmith," will be on hand to perform, in addition to the John Anello Band, a seven-piece ensemble that will play nostalgic tunes as well as popular favorites.

As a special attraction the Saddleback Entertainers will perform a 35-minute Bicentennial show at 6:30 p.m. Horseshoes and volleyball areas will be set up at the northwest corner of the picnic area.

Food concessions available, to name a few, will include hot dogs, cotton candy, Sloppy Joes, soft drinks, beer and home-baked desserts.

The grand finale of the Mission Viejo Activities Committee-sponsored event, a 30-minute Bicentennial fireworks display, will be sparked off at 8:35 p.m.

Coming to arms

Elementary students get a close-up look at a French and Indian War period (1754-1763) American carved pictorial powder horn as Jane Duque, chairman of docents at Bowers Museum, points out its historical significance.

This powder horn is part of the museum's colonial and revolutionary firearms exhibit on view to the public through July 31. Eighteenth and early 19th century firearms, accoutrements, and twenty outstanding engraved powder horns are featured in the display, a segment of the museum's continuing Bicentennial exhibit.

The collection represents a variety of arms used by foot soldiers and civilian frontiersmen during the period 1755-1783.

Dimensions of firearms and the methods of function were varied and reflect the arms technology of the period.

Bowers Museum is located at 2002 North Main St., Santa Ana.

Adventure Days

There will be no perils and plenty of fun in store for Mission Viejo Recreation Center members and their guests who join in Thursday Adventure Days this month.

Adventures will be transported by "Coche Uno," the recreation center's fun bus, to explore wild life at the San Diego Zoo (July 1), and the mysteries of Hollywood at Universal Studios (July 8).

The July 15th expedition is bound for Queen Mary, where the live musical review "The British Are Coming" will be shown.

Knott's Berry Farm will provide a full day's excursion July 22. Price of the outing includes transportation, admission and 10 ride tickets.

Living picture

This "living picture", a human reproduction of "Birth of the Flag" by Henry Mosler, can be seen in the Pageant of Masters during the 41st annual Festival of Arts, July 16-Aug. 29.

The world-famous pageant is presented nightly at the Irvine Bowl in Laguna Beach. In a salute to the nation's Bicentennial, the pageant will feature 200 years of American Art.

The Festival of Arts' open air exhibit area provides the perfect setting for the display of works by about 180 of the area's finest artists and craftsmen.

Although tickets to the Pageant of the Masters are sold long before the season begins, it is often possible to obtain tickets which have been returned to the box office for resale once the festival opens in July.

Admission to the Festival grounds is $5 for adults, $2 for children 12 and under. Exhibit grounds are open noon to 11:30 p.m.

Free Flicks

Mission Viejo youngsters Christine Hare, left, Pam Pressley and Heidi Hare, right, are all smiles in anticipation of the children's summer program at Mission Viejo Library, as Christy Vasquez, children's librarian, loads the projector.

The program will include free Friday afternoon matinees at the La Paz Junior High School multi-purpose room, 29151 Pradera Dr. through Sept. 3.

The films scheduled for July will begin at 2 p.m., and include "Marx Attacks the World" starring Flash Gordon (July 2); "Nuño and the Zebra" (July 9); the Little Rascals in "Little Daddy and Bargain Day" (July 16), "Bride of Frankenstein" (July 13); and "White Mane" (July 10).

The library's summer program also includes reading clubs, a game room, artist's wall and treasure hunt.

Further information is available in the Children's Room at Mission Viejo Library and most of the elementary schools.
WTNGA tourney slated Aug. 2-

Beverly Davis, a 17-year-old sure-shot from Jacksonville, Florida, will defend her 1975 Trans-National golfing title Aug. 2-7 when the Trans moves to the Mission Viejo Country Club.

Miss Davis, who defeated 1974 Trans-National champion Nancy Lopez in the final 36-hole match in Tulsa, Oklahoma, last year, is looking for a return victory on the tough Mission Viejo course.

In addition to Misses Davis and Lopez, the field will include 140 of the best amateur golfers from Europe, the United States and Canada—all of whom will compete for custody of the George Ill Bowl, the championship's traveling trophy.

The SIX-DAY EVENT is considered one of the world's three most prestigious women's amateur golf tournaments. For the years the Trans-National has been a proving ground for fine women golfers, many of whom subsequently became pros.

Although the 46-year-old Trans is open to the golfers from foreign nations, the only overseas victory to date has been Michelle Walker of Chatham, Kent, England, who captured the trophy in 1972.

A high level of competition is assured by virtue of the fact that participants must have handicaps of 15 or lower as well as being members of the Women's Trans-National Golf Association in order to qualify for the Trans.

As with the Southern California PGA Sectional Championship, scheduled for the Mission Viejo course July 12-16, spectators are welcome to view the event without paying admission.

The lure of $10,000 in prize money is expected to attract more than 140 of the finest professional golfers from Hawaii, Arizona, Texas and California to the Mission Viejo Country Club July 12-16 for the coveted Southern California Match Play crown.

For the PGA pros the road to riches will be littered by 57 traps, six lakes, and a course so demanding in accuracy that it has become known as "Mission Impossible" in golfing circles.

Competitions in the PGA Southern California Sectional won't be in it "just for the money," however. Although the tournament is lucrative, a win at Mission Viejo means more than that—a chance to play in the PGA Nationals in Washington, D.C., one month later.

With holes known by such names as "La Lagra," "The Teardrop," "El Diablo" (The Devil) and "El Peligro" (The Perilous One), the 6,685-yard par 72 course presents a true challenge to even the most exacting pros.

That includes Jimmy Powell, the defending title-holder from San Dimas, whose gamemanship brought him the SCPGA "Player of the Year" title in 1975 and top money-mover honors. Powell will be off in the company of such golfing greats as Denny Meyers and Jerry Barber, a former PGA national champion.

The schedule calls for two rounds a day and a 36-hole playoff for the title, the winner of which will pocket $2,000 in cash provided by the PGA.

Mission Viejo golf enthusiasts who want to improve their own game by seeing the pros in action will be pleased to know that there is no gallery or admission charge for the pro tourney or the Pro-Am one month later.
